

- No contact or harassment provisions;
- Stay away – residence; and
- Stay away – job, school, temporary residence.

Note that provisions of a juvenile peace order requiring the respondent or victim to participate in counseling, and provisions regarding court costs will not trigger the filing of a delinquency petition.

5.6 Modification or Rescission of a Juvenile Peace Order

The court may modify or rescind a juvenile peace order during the term of the peace order so long as the following has been provided:

1. Notice to the victim and the respondent; and
2. A hearing.

Md. Code CJ § 3-8A-19.4. Notice must be provided first before a hearing can be set on the request for a modification or rescission.

6. Domestic Violence Central Repository

The Domestic Violence Central Repository (DVCR) is a statewide civil protective and peace order database. It contains all civil protective and peace orders including juvenile peace orders issued by Circuit and District Court Judges and Commissioners in any Maryland jurisdiction. This includes all interim, temporary and final orders. The DVCR is a secure near real-time web accessible database. The Maryland Protective/Peace Order Application (MPPA) is the interface used to access the DVCR orders section. The DVCR also produces reports from information contained in protective and peace orders. The DVCR facilitated Maryland's first experience with electronic orders. It allows Court personnel to perform quick, comprehensive searches, which improve communication and eliminate conflicting or simultaneous orders between District and Circuit Courts that share concurrent jurisdiction over domestic violence cases. Access to the MPPA allows Maryland courts and law enforcement agencies access to order data and imaged copies of the actual order itself. The adobe or PDF of the order may be viewed and printed for official use. The use of this Judiciary system is for Court and Law Enforcement purposes only.

It is imperative that all orders be entered into the respective Court input systems (UCS, ACS or DV Courtroom/Office).

POLICY STATEMENT. One of the purposes of the Maryland Protective/Peace Order Application is to eliminate conflicting or simultaneous orders. In the past when a petitioner or respondent is not satisfied with the decision in one court or jurisdiction, he or she will file in another court or jurisdiction. When the DVCR is checked and a conflicting order is found, please refer the party to the issuing jurisdiction to file a competing petition or an appeal.

Self-Certified Abuser Intervention Programs

The programs included on the attached list are abuser intervention programs (AIPs). AIPs are programs specifically designed as interventions for perpetrators of intimate partner abuse. Intimate partners are boyfriends, ex-boyfriends, girlfriends, ex-girlfriends, spouses, ex-spouses or persons in a dating relationship. AIPs are different from anger management programs, which are designed as interventions for perpetrators of violence against strangers, acquaintances, or others who are not intimate partners. Anger management programs focus on anger control and avoiding outbursts of anger that lead to violence. Intimate partner abuse is not about loss of control, but rather maintaining it. Anger management alone does not get to the root of intimate partner violence; that is, the issues of power and control and one person's need and/or perceived right to dominate another.

Some of the providers on the attached list may also offer anger management programs; however there is no system available for voluntary self-certification or monitoring of anger management programs in Maryland. Anger Management Counseling is not suitable or recommended for perpetrators of intimate partner abuse.

The self-certified AIPs listed on the following pages have voluntarily affirmed that they comply with the "Operational Guidelines for Domestic Violence Abuser Intervention Programs in Maryland." The Guidelines, which were developed under the auspices of the Governor's Family Violence Council, set forth policies and procedures that are designed to maximize victim safety and promote abuser accountability as well as program accountability to the courts and other referring organizations.

If you have questions about this list of Self-Certified Abuser Intervention Programs, please call The Governor's Family Violence Counsel, 410-821-2828 or the Department of Family Administration, 410-260-1580.
